M.P.C. 7apr 1960

Suggestions on draft of Mr. Kirkpatrick's address of April 7, 1960

p. 1: "a fitting way" instead of "the best way", ... to introduce passage from St. John

prodij prodij

- p. 1, par. 2, add a further sentence, re explanation of St. John:

  "This passage from St. John also symbolizes one of our

  "ation's aspirations as spokesman and leader of the free world—

  the conviction that the search for tmath is a basic ingredient genuine—

  for the restoration and advancement of/freedom across the world."

  (that is, the free exchange of ideas, etc. etc.)
- p. 1, par. 3: suggest this alternate sentence(changes underlined):

  "Tonight I will tell you something about the Central Intelligence

  (effectively)

  process—how it works and how/it contributes to our system of national security ..."

- p. 1, line 6 from bottom: "phenomenon," not "phenomena"
- p. 4, suggest change wording re Truman's "impatience";
  - ** PresidentTruman, impressed by the need fax of full,

    objective, and timely intelligence, sought to hasten the establishment of a postwar intelligence organization. He directed his Chief of Staff, Admiral Leahy ... (omit the reference to "impathence")

- p. 5, line 2 and 3: question "obviously ... changes" in intelligence; suggest, instead, "various refinements have evolved in the structure and techniques of the intelligence organization ..."

  "This evolution produced a coordinated ... system ..." etc.

- p. 5. line in 11 from bottom: lest a literalist object to "wehicles", maggest more descriptive phrase "Various approaches ... are used..." (also p. 6, par. 2)

- p. 6, line h: "if meanwhile some information of anespecially critical nature should arrive ..." etc.
- p. 6, par. 2. "National L. telligence Estimate", instead of "National Estimate"
- p. 6, par. 3: instead of "constant" flow (a word used twice), sx suggest "intemittent flow ..., produced as needed ..., etc."
- p. $, line 4; instead of "The" department drafting this or that section, suggest: "Each department contributes to the drafting of the estimate, depending on what phase or factor in the foreign situation needs to be appraised a "...
- p. 8, line 6: "compendium of all pertinent knowledge"...
- p. 6: intelligence defined: "It is intelligence rather than information because it has been carefully assembled, critically analysed, with appropriate conclusions directed at the particular foreign situation which is of national-security interest at the moment."
- p. 8, line 12 from bottom: instead of "confusion" (it is not clear to this reader whether the public or the government is "confused")— suggest omitting last 2 lines and starting new paragraph:
  "In short, the role of intelligence in the government is to keep the policy makers informed ...
- p. 9, line 4: influence of intelligence depends of "relative weight":

  meaning not clear. Suggest, instead, "Certainly intelligence does bentribute, and I think contribute effectively, to policy deliberations

Approved For Release 1999/09/07 : CIA-RDP75-00001R000200210006-7

- p. 9, line 9, instead of "always considerable speculation", suggest:

  "whether in times of international crisis, or in more tranquil times, there is always a certain amount of and timeliness

  public speculation as to the accuracy/of our intelligence reports ..."
- p. 10, last 2 paragraphs sound weak, invoking needless "immodesty"

  and re-opening, in various last paragraph, the old and perhaps by-now resolved public question whether the U.S. "needs" an intelligence service. Suggest, as an alternative, a quote or two ef evaluation from The's speech at the cornerstone laying, last Nov. 3 (attached), or AWD's address on the intelligence-estimating machinery, last Jan. 26 in NYC (attached)
